

Slumping market forces real estate schools to join hands

Tampa Bay Business Journal - November 9, 2006

As the number of applicants for real estate school flattens during the current market slow down, two schools have partnered to offer property management courses.

The Ed Klopfer Schools of Real Estate is now offering courses from the Landlord Academy. Landlord Academy course topics include evaluating rental areas, fair housing law, maximizing cash flow, and day-to-day property management. Its central learning center is in Tampa, but its courses will now be taught at all 15 Klopfer locations from the Panhandle south to Naples. Sarasota-based Klopfer Schools offer classroom instruction in licensing and certification courses ranging from real estate to mortgage broker, to property appraiser, and home inspector.
